Rubber Shares
Iron And Steel
The Silver Outlook

THE steady increase in the number of rubber companies registered in Shanghai that are beginning to pay interim dividends must necessarily serve to harden the price of the various shares and attract more investors to this counter. Almost every rubber estate is at present making a decent profit, some have the very low all-in-cost of 6d. per pound while in the case of the others this does not exceed 8d. per pound, so that at the present quotation of a shilling and four pence per pound for raw rubber there should be opportunity of paying handsome dividends to shareholders. The Consolidated Rubber Estates (1914) Ltd. has just declared an interim distribution of eight percent, equivalent to Tls. 0.06 per share, payable on or after October 15. For the year ending December 31 last this company paid a dividend of Tls. 0.10 per share, the profit for the year being Tls. 53,368.66 to which there was brought forward from the previous year Tls. 40,418.48, making Tls. 93,787.14. The amount carried forward was Tls. 23,192.35. The Sungei Duri also pays a dividend.

The accounts of the Sungei Duri are just out, and they disclose a working profit of Tls. 40,771.06 for the year, which, added to the amount of Tls. 28,351.69 brought forward from last year's accounts makes a total of Tls. 69,122.75 standing at credit of profit and loss account. Out of this the directors of this company intend to pay a dividend of ten percent of Tls. 0.85 per share and to carry forward Tls. 22,765.93.

BLAST FURNACES

There are seven blast furnace plants in China, three of which are centered round Hankow which draw their ore, coal and limestone from neighboring sources. Two plants are in southern Manchuria and one in Korea, which obtain their raw materials from those regions. The new Lungyen plant, near Peking, levies on ore and coal not far away, and other sources are being opened up. Altogether these seven plants contain fourteen blast furnaces, ranging from 100 to 400 tons capacity per day, but the two hundred ton furnaces at Hanyang are obsolete and may never again be operated. The active furnaces are as follows: Hanyang two of 250 tons, Yangtsze one of 100 tons, Tayeh two of 400 tons, Penhshu two of 150 tons, Anshanchan two of 200 tons, Kenjyho two of 100 tons and Lungyen one of 250 tons.

The total capacity of all these plants is 2,550 tons, and at 90 percent of full operation would mean 840,000 tons per year. Both iron and steel are found in abundance in China, Manchuria and Korea in close proximity to each other, and like magic we are seeing blast furnaces erected at the mines with transportation facilities installed. Japan is at a disadvantage in the iron industry because of the inadequate output of iron ore. She can, however, use the comparatively accessible output from Chosen and Manchuria and from China, where the resources are not only practically inexhaustible but the quality is greatly superior.

COKE FROM CHINA

The same is true of fuel. Japan's production of coking coal is insufficient to develop her iron and steel industry, but this deficit can be made up by imports from China. The demand for pig iron in Japan is increasing rapidly, while the demand for steel has shown a similar growth. Before the Great War this was supplied largely by imports but later the government-owned Yawata iron works began to produce steel, and the output in Japan has since shown a steady rise.

The latest addition to the blast furnace plants in China is that of the Lungyen Mining Administration in the Peking district. In 1918 this mining administration was formed to develop minerals and build a blast furnace with the Chinese government holding a half interest in the company. A site for the furnace was selected at Shiechinshan, in Chihli Province, about eleven miles from Peking on the Peking-Mentowkow Railroad and about a hundred miles from Tientsin. The blast furnace represents the latest practice in American design and is intended to be the first unit of the first steel plant in North China. Iron ore, oolitic in form and averaging about 50 percent iron, will come from recently discovered iron deposits at Hsuanhwa, in Chihli province. Coal and coke will be secured from coal mines in Honan Province and the limestone will come from newly opened mines eight miles from the plant.

SILVER TARIFF ASKED

A tariff on foreign silver is sought by the western mining interests of the United States as a means of increasing the price of the white metal. A duty of thirty cents per ounce is proposed. Some American mining men be-

BERLIN ORDERS MARTIAL LAW TO CHECK CHAOS

Kearney Makes Sweeping Denial Of Arms Charges In Exciting Court Case

Mayer And Horowitz, Government Witnesses, Give Damaging Testimony—Defense Pleads Confiscation, Not Sale—Trial Ends Today

In a long, gruelling all-day session of the United States Court for China the charge of importing arms and ammunition made against Captain L. D. Kearney was practically completed yesterday. The trial began before Judge Charles Sumner Lobingier at 9.30 o'clock yesterday morning and continued until 7 o'clock last night when Captain Kearney finished testifying in his own behalf. The case will be resumed this morning when rebuttal witnesses for the prosecution will be heard and should be completed and in the Judge's hands for a verdict by noon.

The feature of the session was Captain Kearney's evidence. He was on the witness stand for two hours at the afternoon session and for the first hour spoke steadily, with only two or three momentary interruptions, reciting the story of his adventurous life on the China Coast and his actions in the alleged arms deal. He denied that he had purchased or sold the arms from the Russian vessels, describing the deal as merely a confiscation of the arms and munitions by the Chinese Government in which he merely acted in the capacity of paid adviser to the Chinese Admiralty.

LAUGHS GALORE

Captain Kearney time after time caused the spectators to break out in loud laughter because of the humor of some of his replies, the excitement he showed in repudiating the testimony of Harry Horowitz and George A. Mayer, and in the tilts he had with U. S. District Attorney Husar. On several occasions Judge Lobingier had to interupt his testimony and caution him against irrevalent answers and arguing with the District Attorney. On the whole, however, Captain Kearney made a splendid witness in his own behalf, despite the fact that at some times, when he was going full speed, the court reporter was unable to make his flying pencil keep up with Captain Kearney's tongue.

ASKS DISMISSAL

At the outset Mr. C. S. Franklin, attorney for Captain Kearney asked for a dismissal of the charge on the grounds that an official communication had been sent the court by the Chinese Government which explained the entire proceedings and proved Kearney's innocence. Judge Lobingier overruled Mr. Franklin's motion on the grounds that the letters were not addressed to the Court, that only was one an original (the others being copies) and that they could not be admitted as evidence anyway.

Mr. Husar then opened the case for the prosecution by calling Mr. W. Fredericks, owner of Frederick's Hotel on Jukong Road, who gave testimony to the effect that Captain Kearney, who at that time was living at the hotel, had asked him to get him a good Russian interpreter, and he had consequently introduced Harry Horowitz, who was engaged. Horowitz worked for Kearney for two or

COOLIDGE WINS PEOPLE'S FAVOR SAYS TRAVELLER

Mr. R. R. Hind, Of Manila, Talks Of Next Presidential Prospects

Attention in the United States is beginning to focus upon those figures reckoned as presidential timber, with a strong concentration of favorable consideration for President Coolidge, according to Mr. Robert R. Hind, president of the Philippine Sugar Association and general manager of the Pampanga Sugar Mills, who is passing through Shanghai on his way to Manila after a several months' trip through America. Mr. Hind, who is also editor of the Sugar News, sugar dealers' publication in Manila, arrived by the President Taft yesterday and is proceeding by the same vessel today.

"The general sentiment as I found it in the States," Mr. Hind said, "is that the people should give President Coolidge ample opportunity to demonstrate his ability before seriously mentioning anyone else for the candidacy, so far as his party is concerned. His cause was much strengthened by his attitude in the recent anthracite coal strike matter. In turning the matter over to Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania he indicated his attitude toward the question of states' rights—not making the issue a Federal one.

"This action is taken as showing in an unmistakeable way the spirit of the man, because Pinchot is regarded as presidential material, and by placing the strike matter in his hands President Coolidge demonstrated that he was big enough to overlook the political value for Pinchot of a settlement of the strike—a thoroughly unselfish act.

"Of possible candidates in the present cabinet, Mr. Hughes is the outstanding figure. It is felt in many quarters that his work during the Disarmament Conference has well fitted him for a second nomination and it is generally held that during the past eight years, since his previous nomination, he has strengthened his case.

"Hiram Johnson has come back from Europe with his attitude toward the World Court unchanged and the feeling is that he will only be a candidate if the convention fails to nominate Coolidge, Pinchot or Hughes."

The steamer President Taft, on which Mr. Hind sailed from San Francisco on September 6, was the first American relief vessel to leave for Yokohama from the Pacific Coast after the earthquake and brought over from America large cargo of foodstuffs and supplies for the quake victims. The ship was delayed in sailing while a considerable quantity of cargo was unloaded to make way for the relief shipment. When the Taft reached Yokohama it was found that there were adequate stores of food on hand there, so this part of the shipment was taken on to Kobe. Other supplies including 1,500 bales of clothing

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Sept. 26.—The Temps emphasises the unanimity of the decision of the Conference of Ambassadors with regard to the responsibility for the Janina assassinations, which indicates that Italy has obtained satisfaction. Moreover, the Italian Ambassador has confirmed that the evacuation of Corfu will be an accomplished fact tomorrow.

Weihaiwei Agreement Is Made Public By British

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Sept. 27.—The official text of the Weihaiwei Rendition Draft Agreement was issued this afternoon by the British Legation.

The British Government proposes to return the full sovereignty over Liukungtao to China and in return China will allow the anchorage after the Chinese Navy for a period of years which may be extended by mutual agreement.

The British Government does not ask for compensation for naval lands and buildings on the island but in return the Chinese government will loan certain lands and buildings to the British Navy for purposes of instruction and recreation.

Liukungtao will not be opened to foreign trade or residence but will be maintained by China as a naval base under the control of the Chinese Navy. Similarly, the whole leased territory on the mainland will be returned to China, a small portion being set aside as an area for foreign trade and residence, in which a special municipal area will be established.

The British Government will return all government lands and buildings gratis, the Chinese Government in return placing certain specified land and buildings at the disposal of the British Government for use as a consulate, a club, a golf course and a cemetery. The territory will be governed by a Chinese administrator appointed by the Central Government, who will be assisted as far as the above-mentioned municipal area is concerned by a Sino-Foreign Advisory Committee.

The Chinese Government undertakes to maintain the existing police and sanitary regulations, under which the territory has been well-governed during the past quarter of a century.

The Chinese Maritime Customs will collect the duties and control the harbor as in the treaty ports, a portion of the revenue being devoted to the municipal extense of upkeep and construction of roads.

Foreign landowners in the territory will exchange their freehold titles for leases of 30 years' duration, renewable at the holders' option on the same terms.

The British Government will not ask for monetary compensation from the Chinese Government for money expended on the maintenance and development of the territory during the British occupation. The Chinese Government, on its part, agrees to inaugurate a system of motor and cart roads connecting Weihaiwei with the hinterland in the interests of the trade of the port.

GUARD HALTS LEGISLATORS IN KLAN WAR

Attempt To Hold Session Is Blocked By Oklahoma Militiamen

(BY UNITED PRESS)

Oklahoma City., Sept. 26.—In a situation unprecedented in the history of the United States, Governor Walton today prevented the legislature from convening.

The legislators entered the capitol corridors, but soldiers barred the entrances to the senate chamber where the impeachment meeting was planned.

The legislators left the building peaceably and paraded and met later in a hotel. They declared that the fight has just begun and that they will ask the courts for an injunction preventing the governor from interference with the session which they propose to hold and at which they will endeavor to impeach him.

The whole city is virtually an armed camp and the most intense excitement is evidenced everywhere.

(Reuter's Service)

Oklahoma City, Sept. 26.—The members of the legislature assembled at the state capital today, but found all the doors closed and guarded. The Members gathered in a corridor, where the Speaker endeavoured to address them. The colonel commanding the troops then loudly called on them to remain motionless, while he read the order prohibiting the holding of the session, and ordered their dispersal. They thereupon repaired to a hotel, where they drew up a declaration of their intention to take legal action to support their rights.

THOUSANDS OF BULGAR REBELS STILL HOLD OUT

Rigid Censorship Prevents Accurate Appraisal Of Situation

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 27.—The severe censorship at Sofia prevents an accurate appraisal of the situation and has up to the present withheld information with regard to reconstruction of the Cabinet on coalition lines. Moreover, it is now clear that the rising was originally fairly extensive and mainly Agrarian with a good sprinkling of Communists, whereas semi-official despatches from Sofia throw the bulk of the blame on the Communists.

The latest semi-official despatch states that several thousands are still holding out at Ferdinand in the Bercovitza district, where a Cheka has been instituted and has hanged nineteen persons.

(Reuter's Service)

Sofia, Sept. 26.—It is semi-officially stated order has been restored in the majority of districts where Communists had been creating trouble.

The only center where the Communists have not yet been subdued is Ferdinandovo, but measures with a view to their repression there are proceeding normally.

It is anonunced that several chiefs of Communist bands have committed suicide, and others have been massacred by their supporters. Many Communists who surrendered are stated to have been carrying rifles of Russian pattern.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 27.—The Bavarian Government's proclamation at Munich, prescribing "temporary measures," follows closely on the lines of that of President Ebert.

Further news of the trend of events is anxiously awaited in London in view of earlier Berlin telegrams describing the electrical state of opinion resulting from the national humiliation as a consequence of the Ruhr surrender.

Dr. von Kahr's move was at first interpreted as separatist and fascistic, but the adoption of similar measures throughout the Reich is held to denote concerted action to safeguard peace in the present critical situation.

France Taking Triumph Coolly

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Sept. 26.—In the proclamation announcing the cessation of passive resistance President Ebert avoids mentioning that the declared defaults of Germany were the cause of the occupation of the Ruhr. He feigns to believe that annexationist aims were not foreign to the occupation forgetting that on two occasions Dr. Stresemann has accepted declarations made by M. Poincare definitely stating the temporary character of the occupation.

The French press has not yet had time to comment on President Ebert's proclamation. It announces that the cessation of passive resistance was variously received in the different German circles according to their particular interests.

Whilst the announcement has produced a feeling of relief in the occupied territory, where 600 employees of the central telegraph station have unconditionally resumed work, the Deutsche Zeitung reports that the Bavarian Nationalists are making military preparations and adds: "It is to be hoped that the Bavarian Government, which even yesterday was ranged by the side of Dr. Stresemann, will not let such a dangerous agitation develop."

The Tempe declares that "France awaits Dr. Stresemann's actions and is following the example of M. Poincare, a Lorrainer who has gone through too many trials to allow himself to be intoxicated by success," and recalls that an international situation is not arranged like a "stage setting."

The Intransigeant, considering the task of tomorrow, declares that the Allied forces, who for eight months have served a rude apprenticeship in the Ruhr without German assistance, will be in a position to assure effective control when the occupied districts have recovered their normal activity.

Whilst the London Daily Mail devotes a long article to the triumph of France, the Daily Chronicle agrees that France has evidently won the first rubber.

The Nation Belge does not lose sight of the practical aspect of the reparations question. It declares that it is for the German Chancellor to explain how he intends to settle the German debt. Meanwhile the Ruhr remains in the hands of the French and Belgians as a pledge for their credit.

The Giornale d'Italia emphasises the success gained by M. Poincare's policy. Events, which have completely justified it, prove that the Germans, who had arrived at the brink of a precipice, have stopped, and, rather than commit suicide, have preferred to bend their necks and admit themselves beaten.

The Messagero says that it is not surprised at France's victory.

The Zurich Gazette declares that France has attained her end and that M. Poincare, thanks to the inflexibility of his line of conduct, has gained the second victory for France.

The news of the cessation of passive resistance has produced a marked impression on all the ...British press of the Stockholms Dagblad says: "Resistance has proposed with the meekness of a lamb stone. M. Poincaré is the ...of the day. It is apparent ... passive resistance has been ... Germany an act of treason ... herself. This resistance ... only madly devoted Germany to ruin."

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, Sept. 26.—The proclamation to the German people, ... by President Ebert and ... Imperial Cabinet Ministers, announcing the abandonment of passive resistance, says:

"The former productivity of the Rhineland and the Ruhr has ceased, the economic life of occupied and unoccupied Germany is disorganised and there is serious danger that by adhering to the present policy it may become impossible to create a stable currency and to maintain the economic life and bare existence of our people. In the interests of Germany's future and of the Rhineland and Ruhr this danger must be averted. In order to maintain the life of the people and state we are today confronted with the bitter necessity of breaking off the fight."

The proclamation voices the Reich's gratitude to the heroic passive resisters in the Ruhr and Rhineland, the Reich's assistance to whom last week cost 3,500,000,000,000 marks while the current week's expenditure is at least double. It declares that the first duty of the Government is to see that the prisoners are released and that those expelled permitted to return.

The proclamation emphasises that the Reich will not lend itself to any arrangement depriving it of the smallest piece of German soil, and says that it depends on the invading Powers and their allies by adhering to this idea to make Germany pause or to bring home all the consequences which ensue for relations between peoples.

Note: The concluding sentence is given exactly as cabled. It is probable that its vagueness was studied in order to avoid its interpretation as a threat.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 26.—The Cabinet sat for two and a half hours this morning. The sitting was fully occupied with hearing Mr. Stanley Baldwin's statement on his conversations with M. Poincaré and considering the new situation arising from the German decision to abandon passive resistance.

It is felt that matters are rather in a transition stage. The British Government will probably await developments in France and Germany before making a definite move. Such developments now that passive resistance is ended, may be expected any day to follow speedily upon the British notice of the Imperial Conference on October 1.

Jascha Heifetz

Elman, Zimbalist, Parlow—then Kreisler and now twenty-one-year old Jascha Heifetz, all admittedly great violinists.

Heifetz played his first concert here last night at the Town Hall before a large audience. Columns more might be written but there is a wealth of eloquence in the statement that "Heifetz played here last night."

He gave a concert which included such numbers as to give him opportunity to demonstrate his wonderful powers and the prolonged applause that greeted him gave evidence of Shanghai's appreciation.

The first part of the program included Vitali's Chaconne, played for the first time here and heard for the first time by many Shanghai people, and Mendelssohn's Concerto in E-Minor, and the applause was such as to bring the artist back for an encore after he had returned to the stage three times. For the encore he played the "Valse Bluette," linked with the name of Heifetz as is the Humoreske with Elman or the Caprice Viennois with Kreisler.

The seven numbers in the second part were tactfully selected for a Shanghai audience for they comprised what are known as the "popular" numbers played by famous violinists.

In all of these was Heifetz wonderful. Schubert's Ave Maria, on the G string and then in double stops, brought tremendous applause and this was followed by the delightful Mozart Minuet, Wilhelmy's, arrangement of Chopin's Nocturne (D-Major) and then the Beethoven Chorus of Dervishes, arranged, incidentally by Leopold Auer, the famous Russian who has nurtured at least three of the world's greatest violinists, including Heifetz.

A Tchaikowsky Melodie and a Paganini caprice, likewise arranged by Auer, also gave evidence of the artist's versatility. The audience evinced little desire to leave and after coming back to the stage three times, Heifetz played for his final encore the "Slavonic Dance."

Shanghai music lovers have had an opportunity now of hearing the leaders in the world of the violin. The principle topic of conversation last night at the interval and after the concert was comparing them. Perhaps Heifetz will be remembered best for his technique; Elman for his tone; Kreisler for his interpretations. There is no "greatest."

Too often a concert such as that of last night is discussed with only Heifetz as the subject of conversation. But Isidor Achron, truly a great pianist, who accompanied Heifetz, deserves unstinted praise. Embodying every quality of an artist, Achron was all sympathy in his playing. He aided greatly in bringing out the best of Heifetz.

picked up at Honolulu, were unloaded at the stricken port.

"It is interesting that the Taft should be the first relief ship to reach Japan from America after the disaster," Mr. Hind commented, "in view of the fact that former President Taft did so much to bring about amicable feeling between the Occident and Orient."

Mr. Hind spoke with optimism of business conditions in America, particularly referring to the probable future commercial dealings between that country and Japan.

"Following President Harding's death," he said, "there was a momentary general slump. For a week or ten days the country seemed dazed by the national calamity, as people slowly came to appreciate the greatness of their loss.

"At present, while there is a little dissatisfaction regarding prices among the Middle Western farmers, the general attitude toward business is good.

"It is to be noticed in California that a great deal of San Francisco capital is going to the Southern part of the state, which will undoubtedly tend to modify the feeling between North and South in California.

"I found a great deal of interest in the Oriental trade. The feeling after the earthquake was that it was America's opportunity to be of assistance to Japan, and that this would tend to bring the two countries closely together. America's response to the appeal from the stricken country was immediate and characteristic of the American people, and I learned that in Japan the official view has already changed somewhat toward America's attitude. In the opinion of many San Francisco business men with whom I talked, the so-called Japanese question has been settled for some time to come."

Mr. Hind is returning to Manila at this time in order to attend the first annual meeting of the Philippine Sugar Association, which will convene early in October. It will be the first convention in the Islands embracing the Philippine sugar industries.

There Kearney Stark that he would pay for arms and that the Russians better sell to him because if went to any other port the would all be confiscated.

dmiral Stark, according to rowitz, said he wanted about 0,000 for the arms and rney said he would have to at them before he could set a price. To cinch the deal, witness said, Kearney threw 500 on the table and told Stark o and have a good time.

ANOTHER TRIP

Kearney sent Stark and the f of staff back to the hotel in automobile that night and the t day, after the lists had been nslated by a friend of the ness, Kearney went with them Nanking, he said. While he away Horowitz said that he Cochrane (also known as yer) visited the fleet as rney had told them to look und and examine the goods y were to purchase. They went board the Chinese man-of-war were told by Admiral Tu to whether they could buy any vate arms on board the ships, ering them $50 each for any es they might secure. They ught 12 or 14 rifles, he said, were paid by Admiral Tu.

Before Kearney went to nking again and when Stark covered he was leaving he red for more money. Horowitz d he took a sealed letter from rney to Admiral Tu to get 000 for Stark. He met Admiral Tu at the Chinese Naval Club near the Race Course and handed him the letter.

SMALL CHANGE

"I've only got $3,000 with me," the Admiral replied, according to the witness.

They took that amount to Admiral Stark, however, and received a receipt. On Kearney's return from Nanking they all went to Woosung again and Kearney gave witness some money with which to pay for the rifles he had bought. Kearney then made his third trip to Nanking, saying he was going to get all the money for Stark as the Russians were going to Manila and wanted so much in Mex. and so much in gold, Horowitz said. Every night a cargo boat was to go alongside the Russian vessels and take off some of the arms as Stark would not give them all at one time. He wanted all the money first.

Again Stark demanded more money and Horowitz and Cochrane went to Admiral Tu, got $2,000, and delivered it to the Russian commander. Finally Kearney tried to get rid of him, he said, and had never paid him a cent for his services although he had given him a few little presents.

CROSS EXAMINED

Cross-examined by Mr. Franklin Horowitz denied that Captain Kearney had at any time, and particularly on one occasion at Woosung, slapped his face. He also denied that he had any quarrels with Kearney except that he went to ask for money due him and was thrown out.

George A. Mayer was the next witness called and verified a great deal of the testimony given by Horowitz. He also stated that he had seen $5,000 paid by Kearney to the Russians on one occasion and at another time had been present when Kearney paid Stark four checks for $10,000 each for the arms and munition she had purchased. The checks, the witness said, had been given Kearney by Admiral Tu, who, in turn, paid them to the chief of staff for Admiral Stark.

IMPORTANT LETTER

The afternoon session opened with Mr. J. P. Davis, Executive Consul at the American Consulate-General, being called by both the prosecution and defense in turn. Mr. Husar first called Mr. Davis to testify that the American Consulate had received a letter from Capt. Kearney in which he admitted having been engaged in the transaction and gave a list of the guns and munitions taken off the Russian ships.

Mr. Davis was then excused, which closed the case for the prosecution, and immediately recalled to the stand by Mr. Franklin for the defense.

Mr. Davis was called upon to produce a letter from American Consul Davis at Nanking to the Consulate here enclosing a letter from Admiral H. K. Tu, Commander in Chief of the Chinese Navy, setting forth certain facts regarding the case.

The attempted introduction of the letter immediately began a hot fight between Mr. Franklin and Mr. Husar. Mr. Franklin contended that the letter was an official document from one branch of the Chinese Government to a branch of the American Government through the usual government channels and as such was an exception to the usual rules of evidence which called upon witnesses to appear in court in person so they could be subjected to cross examination and give their evidence under oath. Mr. Franklin cited a number of Supreme Court cases to uphold his contention.

THE OBJECTION

Mr. Husar objected on the ground that the letter was not the best evidence and that Admiral Tu would have to appear in court personally and testify. Mr. Husar refused to recognise that Admiral Tu was the Commander-in-Chief of the Chinese Navy, that he had the authority to engage Kearney as an advisor, if he did, and made strong protest against the letter being introduced in any form as a violation of the rules of evidence.

The fight over the introduction of the letter occupied the Court for an hour, finally being given to Judge Lobingier for consideration. Mr. Franklin stated that in case the letter was not allowed to be introduced he would ask the Court to take steps to have Admiral Tu and possibly Commissioner for Foreign Affairs Hsu Yuan in court, or would ask that Mr. Husar, Mr. S. Fessenden and himself go to Nanking to take a deposition from Admiral Tu. The letter over which the fight raged was signed by Admiral Tu as commander-in-chief of the Chinese Navy and explained that the seizure of the Russian arms was a confiscation, not a sale, and that Kearney had merely acted as an advisor to the Chinese Navy.

Mr. Walter Chen watched the case in the interests of Admiral Tu.

KEARNEY ON STAND

Captain Kearney next took the stand for his two hour session. For the first hour he regaled the Court with a minute explanation of his employment on the China Coast over a period of 40 years during which time he was in the old Imperial Chinese Navy.

Captain Kearney finally unwound down to the time when he decided to stay ashore in Shanghai because at that time he was on an up-river steamer, had to stand on the bridge at long intervals, and because of his artifical feet he was unable to stand the strain.

"I used to break 'em about every six months," Captain Kearney said, "and so decided to come to Shanghai and stay ashore where I could get the proper attention."

Kearney, with one swoop, denied emphatically that he had paid a single copper cash for any of the Russian arms, insisting that he was merely the agent of the Chinese Navy, had handled none of the money, and that the arms were for the Chinese Navy only.

the Chinese Navy only.

BECOMES ADVISOR

He explained that while he was living at Fredericks Hotel he had occasion to sell the Chinese Naval Hospital at Woosung a quantity of paint and while there Dr. Ling had suggested that as he had been in the old Imperial Navy he might be of assistance to the navy now. Acting on that assumption Dr. Ling, he said, had taken the matter up with Admiral Tu at Nanking and after several conferences he had finally been retained by Admiral Tu as an advisor at a salary of $200 a month.

About that time the Russian vessels arrived off Woosung and because of the stories of the arms on board Kearney began an investigation. It was discovered, he said, that Admiral Stark was in communication with representatives of Dr. Sun in Canton and the rebels in Amoy for the sale of the arms and he suggested that Admiral Tu confiscate them.

On his advice Admiral Tu decided to confiscate the arms and munitions, but because of the fact that there were many women and children aboard and they were broke he suggested that they be given enough coal and supplies to get them to another port.

GETS ASSISTANTS

Capt. Kearney then explained that he had hired Mayer, who was down in his luck, to help him aboard the ships because of his artifical feet, and had taken Horowitz along as an interpreter. The first trip to the fleet, he said, began the conversations with Admiral Stark. Horowitz, he said, couldn't speak enough Russian and his services were dispensed with. He allowed him, however, to visit the vessels and buy jewels and furs the Russians had, but when he later found out that Horowitz had demanded $10,000 cumsha from Admiral Stark and had also made an offer to purchase the arms for $250,000 he was fired. Kearney had a quarrel with him at Woosung, he said, and slapped his face. Since then Horowitz had been sore at him and he ascribed his evidence in this case as attempted revenge.

HIS VERSION

Captain Kearney declared that he had gone to Admiral Stark as the representative of Admiral Tu, and had informed him through Captain Formin, his chief-of-staff, that the Chinese Navy had decided to confiscate all the arms and ammunition aboard, but that as they did not like to work a hardship on the Russians, who were penniless, they would advance them sufficient funds for coal and supplies and other necessary articles and repairs if the fleet, in return, would sail for some other port as soon as the arms were removed.

Admiral Stark, he said, asked for three days in which to consider the question, and then wanted to be paid for the arms. Capt. Kearney said that he, acting upon instructions from Admiral Tu, again refused payment for the arms but promised that they would be given money for urgent needs.

Finally, because the Russians were selling arms to Chinese who came alongside in sampans, Captain Kearney said they decided to run the Ping Yang alongside to prevent such deals and he had personally informed Detective Inspector Givens of the Municipal Police that the Russians had sold a number of bombs in Shanghai. Acting on his information, he said, the police had raided one place and confiscated a large number. At about the same time, he testified, he had notified the American Consulate that the arms aboard the vessels had been confiscated by the Chinese, and sent Consul-General Cunningham a list of all arms and munitions confiscated and their destination. At the same time, he declared, the River Police and the Customs were aware of the fact that the arms had been confiscated by the Chinese and were being removed from the vessels and sent to NanKing.

A THREAT

Admiral Stark had continued to refuse to allow the arms to be

They believe that the arts and manufactures, including the motion picture industry, will consume practically all the silver produced in the United States. The Federal Government, it semi-officially stated, will be out of the market for silver for two or three years, having purchased all metal to recoin silver dollars and having an available supply for subsidiary coinage. One factor which has tended to depress silver has been action by several governments in reducing the amount of silver in their coinage, thereby making them sellers of silver, whereas it had been expected they would be large buyers.

CHINESE ASKS LEAGUE TO AID RUSS REFUGEES

Ample Appropriation Should Be Made For High Commissioner

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, September 26.—The reduction of Armaments Committee of the League of Nations today unanimously passed a resolution extending the work of the Mixed Temporary Commission for another year, and asking for a Committee report as soon as possible before the next meeting of the Assembly. The Committee also expresses the opinion that the Council should co-operate with the Governments with a view to preparing a general plan for the reduction or limitation of armaments.

At the meeting of the Fifth Commission of the Assembly Mr. Chu Chao-hsin paid a tribute to the work of Dr Nansen for the Russian refugees. He emphasised that the Chinese Government and people had done their best to take care of Russian refugees in China, but, owing to their continual arrival, the local authorities had experienced some difficulty in dealing with the problem. Mr. Chu declared that it was the duty of the League to help Russian refugees, even if the burden became heavier than it had been during the past few years. He therefore proposed that the work of the High Commissioner for Russian Refugees should be continued and that an ample appropriation of funds should be made for the High Commission.

Russian Women Brought To Court Following Fracas

Two Charged As Result Of Attack On Third In Debt Row

As a result of a feminine free-for-all argument in a Russian boarding house at 21 Miller Road Wednesday afternoon, Valia Dudeck was sent to hospital with an ear and her nose bitten and a scalp wound caused by a water tumbler, while Mrs. A. All three women are undesirable characters, according to Detective Sergeant Schmidt's testimony yesterday. The complainant came to Hongkew station to report the fracas, which grew out of a wordy altercation over a debt. Her face was covered with blood and she was sent to hospital and a doctor had to take several stitches in the wound on her head.

The Dog Watch

By Westa

AMOS Alonzo Stagg, Director of the Department of Physical Culture at the University of Chicago since 1900, and previous to that a famous Yale athlete, contributes an article to the Christian Science Monitor under the heading "Athletics and the Press," in which he condemns the newspapers for giving more publicity to professional than to amateur sport.

This is an old theme with Stagg, and it is as threadbare now as it was twenty years ago, when he first began to harp on it. Ever since he has been connected with the Chicago school he has been hurling brickbats at the professionals and their newspaper supporters with one hand, while using the other to keep his own little halo on straight.

"ON the one side (the professional side) there is the development of the acquisitive side of human nature," he argues, "while on the other side (the amateur side) there is the development of the give attitude. Which makes the better citizens?"

Great stuff, that, from the pen of Amos Alonzo, who has been capitalising his own athletic ability for twenty years at a salary greater than that paid to any other member of the university faculty!

Great stuff to appear under the signature of a man who for two decades has been conducting one of the greatest athletic businesses in the country, with an immense million dollar playing field in which to stage his athletic spectacles and at which the dollars are raked in with a professional technique that might well have been copied from the late Mr. Barnum's cashiers!

Acquisitiveness, my word! Mr. Stagg should step out of his cloisters some Friday preceding the annual Maroon-Michigan football game and observe the ticket speculating activities of those simon pures whose names are enrolled with the university registrar and into whose simple spuls he is paid a bank president's salary to instill the spirit of amateurism and fair play. He would find them plucking the innocents for anything up to five thousand percent profit with an aplomb that would make the detested Doc Kearns or Tex Richard look like disbursing agents for the United Charities by comparison.

TO anybody familiar with the commercialisation of college athletics, as exemplified by the building of stadiums, the employment of professional coaches, trainers, etc., Stagg's talk about the acquisitiveness of professionals strikes one as a case of the pot calling the kettle black. The colleges in America, Mr. Stagg's included, for year's have indulged in a mad race for athletic supremacy—a competitive scramble that has caused educators of an older and saner school to raise warning signals repeatedly, lest the whole American educational system be debauched and ruined.

Stagg and the college he represents, whether justly or not, have been most frequently accused of extravagance in this respect; a charge with which Amos Alonzo must be familiar, for which reason his strictures upon the professional athletes of America and the newspapers which which give reasonable publicity to their activities is laughable indeed.

Kearney Makes Sweeping Denial Of Arms Charges

moved, he continued, and as ey had information that Horo- its had made an offer of $250,- for the lot, and as they knew t Stark was negotiating with nton and Amoy they finally cided to bring a torpedo boat own from Nanking. Capt. arney accompanied it and when ey went alongside the Russian ps delivered an ultimatum that the arms were turned over hin 24 hours they would cut communication with the shore, on their food supplies, and, if cessary, sink the ships.

They finally got together at Naval Club again, Captain arney continued, and there ade the final arrangements for transfer. Admiral Stark was th to give up his arms and uipment, which he declared re worth $1,500,000, but be- the pressure they brought bear on him and the promise a little ready money for ex- nses finally gave in.

ONLY PAYMENTS

The only payment he ever ade to Admiral Stark, he testi- ed, was $1,500 which he passed om Captain Chu, commander of e gunboat Chu Yue, to Chief Staff Formin for the purchase f an automobile the Russians ad aboard one of the vessels. he motor car, he said, was for dmiral Tu, and was now either the Arsenal or in Nanking.

He said that he also knew here was a payment made to he Chief Engineer of the fleet f Tls. 300 odd for repairs, and nother payment to the Texas ompany for Tls. 3,200 for oil pplied the vessels. He had urchased a range-finder for aptain Chu which was worth ,000 for $200 and those, he sserted, were the only small ayments made.

As a final payment of urgent ouds of the Russians he was eight when $40,000 changed ands, he said. The money was Admiral Stark and Captain ain by Captain Chu in four eeks for $10,000 each on the Bank. He had gone to the with them and saw the oney change hands. Captain rman, acting for Stark, had gone with him to the Chin- American Bank of Commerce here the checks were exchanged r $20,000 Mex. and the other 0,000 in a gold draft on Manila. Altogether, he said, the Chin- e expended $75,000 in payment f the confiscated arms. Of that ount he had received $3,500 r his services and he thought Dr. Ling of the Naval spital had squeezed $6,500.

In answer to questions on cross- amination by Mr. Husar Captain earney said that most of the had been rendered useless by e Russians removing delicate rts and blocks. He refuted all e damaging testimony given by ister and Horowitz as lies, and serted that Mrs. Horowitz had ver, so far as he knew, been at ukung. She was suggested as interpreter, he said, but he d told them he didn't want any men around. The first time he had ever seen her was when she appeared in court.

He denied that he had ever itten Horowitz a letter with which obtain $5,000 from Admiral Tu, asserted he had made a full port to Admiral Tu when the was completed, accounting for money that he had expended including money he had received for expenses.

The trial was adjourned until 9:30 o'clock this morning when Mr. Husar finished his cross-examination. At this morning's session the prosecution will put two or three rebuttal witnesses on the stand and Mr. Franklin and Mr. Husar will submit their arguments on the evidence.

LOCAL RELIEF COMMITTEE

Sufferers from the earthquake arriving in Shanghai are being met and cared for by the Relief Committee and by those members who have generously offered hospitality. On Saturday the Committee, hearing of the entirely inadequate provision of warm clothes obtainable for foreigners in Japan, sent by Monday's Empress seven bales of clothes. This left the stock at Headquarters very low, but the steady response shown to our appeals should quickly remedy the deficit.

The Lyric Troupe has very kindly promised the proceeds of its delightful entertainment of yesterday and of the further performance it proposes giving on Friday, October 5th, at the Olympic, to the Local Relief Committee. The entertainment is one which all our children should see.

During the week gifts of clothing, trunks, perambulators, chairs, etc. have been received from: Mesdames P. W. Massey, Douglas Fleming, Cary, Hickling, McMichael, Brankston, MacDonald, Fitzgerald, H. Knight, Burton, Sayer, Carpenter, Marden, F. W. Dieterich, David, Pratt (H. B. M. Consulate, Nanking), Lawford, Evans, E. H. McMichael, Bowman, Jory, C. J. Sparham, H. E. Rigge, Meltraith, H. B. Lane, E. A. Koppe, T. L. Bickerton, McMeekin, Mulvey, C. Maguire, R. Fitch, Steventon, E. W. Torry; Misses Nathan, Connar, Conner; Messrs. MacHam, H. Christen, M. Judah, H. F. REFUGEES LETTERS

Letters addressed to Miss A. Howard, Mr. Thomson, Mrs. R. G. Wharton, Misses Mitford and Howard are lying in the B. W. A. Office.

EMPLOYMENT

The notice boards of the B. W. A. give details of various forms of employment desired and offered.

YE OLDE ENGLISH FAYRE

The cooler weather and plans for Ye Olde English Fayre have hurried nearly all the British women home from holiday resorts, and everywhere in Shanghai one hears of strenuous work being done with needle and telephone, pen and tongue, for the great event. The Fayre will open on Friday afternoon, October 19 when the British Minister and Lady Maclay both hope to be present, and on Saturday, the 20th the Fun of the Fayre is to continue until midnight. It is hoped that all Shanghai will bring or send their children on these days and all form parties for Ye Olde English Dinner at the Fayre on Saturday evening. The Sports Section is determined to offer as many varieties of Hampstead Heath amusements as their space at the Race Club will allow, and for people of quiet tastes, the Dramatic and Musical Sections have arranged indoor entertainment. The Commissariat is providing tea for 4,000 visitors and a light supper for the dance room on Saturday night. As for the stalls, it seems that those who wish to buy useful or other things for themselves, for Christmas presents for home or abroad, will find everything there. Silk stockings, and electric appliances from Canada, leather goods and tinned goods from Australia, woollen garments made by the Hospital Nurses, Xmas puddings and jams and pickles, books—new and old—Xmas cards, in fact everything, and all at reasonable prices.

The Social Service Board will be very grateful if ladies will look through their houses and send to the Old Curiosity Shop any articles that they find are not being used, such as glass, silver, furniture, golf clubs, china, etc. Chinese furniture will be specially acceptable. These may be sent to Mrs. E. T. Byrne, c/o Messrs. F. C. Heffer and Co., 63 Kiangse Road.

The Sweet Stall also asks for contributions, either of money for materials or of offers of home-made sweets. Large quantities of sweets will be required. All B. W. A. members who can make these are asked to contribute and telephone the quantities to Mrs. MacGillivray, 24 Scott Road, or to Mrs. Dowie, 36 Carter Road.

Mrs. Pett, 1A Honan Road, has acquired an excellent toy-stall, and will be glad to accept toys, including mendable ones.

Other offers of help will be gratefully accepted by the Heads of Sections or by the Honorary Secretary to the Fayre at 12 Kiukiang Road.

SECTIONS

The Needlework Section will hold its first meeting at Headquarters on October 8, at 3:30. The Literary Section desires to hold its first meeting after Ye Olde Fayre at Headquarters on October 23 at 5:30.

IDENTITY ERROR COSTS QUARTET FIVE HUNDRED

Chinese Who Impounded Supposed Politician Heavily Fined

It was four saddened and disgusted members of the Hupeh Labor Bureau who walked out of the Mixed Court yesterday after standing trial for the unlawful detention of one Yang Wen-kuk at the Yih Ping Shang Hotel. They had placed Yang under surveillance, and then under a modified sort of arrest, believing him to be one Waung Kyi-oong, said to be a member of parliament sent to Shanghai by Wu Pei-fu with $100,000 to be used in influencing M. Ps. here. Their mistake cost them an aggregate of $500—the alternative being an aggregate of five months in prison.

Testimony given before Assessor Jacobs and Magistrate Kwan by Police Constable Forkin was to the effect that shortly after noon Wednesday a Chinese came to Louza station and reported that a friend of his was being held prisoner at the Y. P. S. The policeman went to the hotel and found Yang in room number 67, with the four defendants standing guard at the door. After their arrest the quartet stated that they were employed by the Hupeh Labor Bureau to watch the movements of parliamantarians here. They produced papers referring to this employment.

Yang said that when he awoke at about 7 a.m. he found two of the men in his room. They accused him as Waung Kyi-oong and refused to believe his denials or to let him bring in friends to establish his identity. They allowed him to move about the halls of the hotel but would not let him go outside. Moreover, one of his guards, the fourth accused, slapped his face and otherwise roughly handled him. At about noon his friend happened along and discovered his predicament.

The Court fined the first three accused $100 each, with the option of a month apiece in prison, and fined the fourth man $200, or two months in jail.

Three Generations And A Resurrection Figure In Court Case

Three generations and a resurrection figured in a case at the Mixed Court yesterday.

First, to make it chronological, there was Mme. Li Hao-sz, 76 years of age, who clung tremblingly to the edge of the prisoners' box. Then there was Li Kung-pah, her son, aged 60, who stood beside her in the dock. Finally there was Su Sung-zung, son-in-law of Li Kung-pah, who occupied the witness box as complainant against the other two.

Some time ago, Su stated, his wife died and more recently he received a letter from Li Kung-pah bearing the tidings that the aged grandmother had become subject to fits and was passing away. Shortly thereafter another letter chronicled her demise. In each of these letters, said Su, the author asked for money and in response to the last he sent by postal money order the sum of $500. The money had scarcely been despatched when he received word from outside parties that the old lady was alive and hale. He was ready to overlook the donation he had made and to rejoice in his grandmother-in-law's return to health, but the old couple began calling at his house and creating disturbances. He asked the Court to order them to keep the peace.

Li Kung-pah, in rebuttal, declared that his letter regarding his mother's death was entirely correct.

"She was dead for three days," he told the Court. "And, then she returned to life. I called at my son-in-law's house because he owes me $600 for medicines sold on my behalf."

The Magistrate advised the parties to settle their financial differences amicably and ordered the two defendants to create no more disturbances in the complainant's home.

"OFFICER 666"

the Cohan and Harris Notable Stage success by McHugh and Smith.

Helping to rob his own house is one of the screamingly ludicrous situations in Tom Moore's latest gloom-chaser. It is crammed full of clean, clever humor, even better than the stage version, which had all New York laughing for months.

The Texas Company Gets Big Contract In The Argentine

The local management of The Texas Company has received reports from their New York office to the effect that the Argentine Government has awarded them a contract for supplying lubricating oils for the Argentine Navy. This is the first contract which the Argentine Government has awarded to a single American Company for an entire line of lubricants. The contract is for one year and calls for any amount of lubricating oils needed and is similar to contracts made by The Texas Company with British, Italian, French and American mercantile marine interests.

They also report an increased demand for the company's products. Since the first of the year, Sweden, New Zealand, Syria, Palestine, China and Japan have all developed increases for The Texas Company's export business with an indication that this demand will continue to grow. There is also an increase in the market of Texaco petroleum products in Italy.

The Texas Company now have delivery facilities in practically all ports of the world.

Exchange Market

In their weekly report on the exchange market, Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand write as follows:

Exchange: The London price of silver for "spot" at 32⅛d. is ⅛d. higher than last week. The quotation for forward is 31⅞d.

Our official quotation for T.T. on London after going to 31½d. is down to 3/1d. i. e. ¼d. lower than last week. Exchange business in connection with "Imports" and "Exports" has been small. Our local Gold dealers who were reported to have an oversold position in Gold T.T. of about £4,000,000—are inclined to rebuy. There is very little visible cover for these operations, and though our market closes steady we are inclined to take a weak view of exchange. Since our last circular the "President Cleveland" has started from America with silver for Shanghai valued at Tls. 3,000,000—making about Tls. 12,000,000 due before the middle of October.

Our stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 23,733,000 a decrease of Tls. 477,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $37,610,000 an increase of $200,000.

Estimated value Tls. 50,812,000 as against Tls. 66, 269,000 held at this time last year.

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

September 27, 1923

Sport and forward bar silver each down ¼d. in London yesterday. The New York price declined to 64⅜ cents and the London-New York cross rate to 455⅞.

The only changes in our official quotations here today were a rise in the Franc rate to 1135 and a drop in the Rupee rate to 226.

Our market here was steady throughout the day. There were at all times sellers of Sterling at 3s. 1⅞d. September, 3s. 1⅜d. October and 3s. 1⅛d. November-December.

There were sellers of Gold Dollars at 71⅛ for near and forward deliveries and sellers of Yen at 68⅜. There was not much business passing however, as speculators were inactive.

Banks were quoting 3s. 2d., 72¾ and 1175 for Sterling, Gold Dollar and Franc bills respectively.

China sold silver in London yesterday and India bought. The market there is reported as being easy. New York report their market as dull and quiet.

Hankow Market

The British Chamber of Commerce of Hankow write as follows in their weekly circular dated Hankow, September 19.

Bar Silver rose steadily from 31 7-16 ready 31¼ forward on the 13th to 31⅞—31 9-16 on the 18th inst., but closed at 31 13-16 ready 31⅜ forward New York-London cross rate dropped from 455¼ on the 12th to 454⅛ on the 14th rose next day to 454¼ and closed 453⅜ on the 19th, T T. rose from 3-2½ to 3-2⅝ on the 14th at which rate it remained steady. 4 m-s which opened at 3-3 5-16 hardened to 3-3½ for Sept.-Oct. 3-3⅞ Nov.-Dec. Market rate: Shanghai taels 97.0625. Local currency $70.45. Native interest 13%.

Imports.—Piece Goods:—There has been some demand for white shirtings and Blacks ex stock and business has been done. Clearances poor but slightly better than last week.

YarnY—Market stronger, and more demand, but prices are still well below Shanghai levels.

Exports.—During the week markets at home would appear to have firmed up a little particularly sesamum-seed as far as Europe is concerned, whilst in America somewhat higher prices are being paid for wool oil. There is also some inquiry for tallow and albumen, but actual business is very small; the deplorable conditions in this country are making business very difficult.

Consider Aid For U. S. Grain Growers

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, Sept. 26.—Among the remedies which the Cabinet is considering to assist the wheat farmers are reduction of rail freights on export wheat and increase of the present tariff on imported wheat. Neither plan would require Congressional action.

Is There a Baby in your home?

If so, or if you have young children, you should not be without a vial of Baby's Own Tablets. Children's ailments come quickly and means should always be at hand to promptly fight them. Baby's Own Tablets are the ideal home remedy. They regulate the bowels, banish constipation, colic, and indigestion, check diarrhoea, relieve colds and croup, allay teething pains almost as if by magic, quiet the nerves, and quickly bring calm, health-giving sleep. Germany's Crisis

A N amazing situation has arisen in Germany following the Ruhr surrender. The government's decision to abandon passive resistance unconditionally is regarded as a national humiliation and is so taken to heart by the German people as a whole that the government has had to suspend the right of public assembly and muzzle the press. Germany apparently is disintegrating as a nation, the appeal for unity seems to have fallen on deaf ears. And the appeal of the Communists to Moscow for help, saying that the moment is ripe to turn all Germany Bolshevist, has been flatly rejected by the Soviet government.

Another phase is that the schism between Britain and France is widened, and the chances of either gaining the support of the United States are for the moment, at least, lessened. This is a pity, for the United States is perhaps best qualified, as The Literary Digest recently put it, "to act as Solomon in the matter," and British and French statesmanship has for sometime past been devoted to "drawing America in."

The British note of August 11 stirred French indignation to the boiling point and it was realised on both sides of the channel that things could not be smoothed over without the aid of Uncle Sam, and this aid might have been forthcoming had not the present situation intervened. New events must take their course.

Foreign press dispatches inform us further that together with the British note was published a memorandum on interallied debts which suggested that Great Britain is willing to make great concessions in the matter of Allied debts to her if a general settlement is reached whereby Britain may obtain a sufficient sum of reparations from Germany and Germany's allies to pay its war debt to America. It was also very plainly stated in the note that France cannot repudiate her debts to Britain, and that the practise of adding interest to capital cannot be indefinitely continued. Furthermore, the note described the Ruhr occupation as doomed to failure, and illegal under the Versailles Treaty, and Britain made it clear that it desires an impartial commission to assess Germany's capacity to pay, this commission to act as auxiliary adviser to the Reparations Commission. With reference to France's debt to Britain what some press correspondents call the "final sting" appears in the following paragraph:

"There was no suggestion, when the loans were made, that repayment should be dependent on recoveries from Germany. Indeed, during the greater part of the period covered by the advances the prospects of any such recoveries were highly problematical. The bills were made subject to renewal for a limited period only after the end of the war, with the clear intention that as soon as French credit was sufficiently re-established they should be redeemed out of French Government loans to be raised on the London market, the redemption money being applied to cancellation of British securities issued on French account.

"While His Majesty's Government has by continuing to renew the bills beyond the period of contract tacitly recognised that the time has not yet arrived for giving effect to this intention, it must be clearly understood that in the absence of a new agreement the carrying out of it remains an obligation of the French Government which cannot honorably be repudiated, and that in the meantime the present practise of adding interest to capital cannot be indefinitely continued, and that commencement of payment, or at any rate part of the interest, should be made as soon as sterling and franc exchange becomes reasonably stable."

Meanwhile, Paris press correspondents report the publication of a French Yellow Book containing the full documents on the French side in the reparations controversy. It contains also instructions from Premier Poincare to Count de Saint Aulaire, the French Ambassador in London, which set forth the official French position, and in which occurs the following:

"It should be made clear in London and Washington as in Brussels that these are the great principles of French action: France does not desire any conquest in Europe; but she does wish to be protected against any return offensive by Germany, either military or economic; she wishes that the cost of reconstruction of her devastated areas, which she has so far borne almost alone, should be paid for by Germany and not by herself; she is willing to pay the debts which she contracted during the war, and though she has made clear the essential difference which exists between her debts and those of Germany, she is ready to give Germany the benefit of advantages conceded to her.

"But she has for the moment no confidence whatever in the good-will of Germany, and that is why she will apply to Germany the conditions of the Treaty of Frankfort: the districts of the Ruhr occupied by us will not be evacuated except in proportion and according to payments made by Germany.

"These are considerations which I wish you to lay before the British Government with utmost precision."

This French Yellow Book, according to Paris Associated Press dispatches, includes a message to the French Ambassador in London, in which Mr. Poincare instructed him to tell Lord Curzon, the British Foreign Secretary, that:

"It is the problem of interallied debts which prevents us from telling Germany now the exact amount she owes us. . . .

"The solution of this problem is in the hands of England, first of all, and the United States afterward. The latter can be approached in a common accord by the Allies when they have agreed upon a formula, and it has become evident everything depends only upon the attitude of the Government at Washington."

We read further in these dispatches that on June 29 Mr. Poincare wrote to the French Ambassador in London, as follows:

"If the British and American Governments hesitate to accept Germany's 'C' bonds in exchange for debts, it is because they know their value is uncertain, and above all because they are unwilling to undertake themselves to recover from the debtor whose defaulting and ill-will they are well acquainted with. . . .

"But we are obliged to tell them we can only pay our debts in proportion as we are paid what is owed us. If they consider our debts too high, and they grant reductions and alleviations, we will immediately give Germany the benefit of this. That is to say, we ask Germany only for what we ourselves are asked. . . .

"It is upon these important points that the British and American Governments must decide before anything else. Consequently, the Franco-Belgian conversations with the British Government must be opened on very broad bases. It is even probable that definite proposals cannot be made to Germany until it has been ascertained from the American Government what it intends to do. The visit of the American Secretary of the Treasury might be made use of from this point of view."

The foregoing allusion to the visit in Europe of Secretary Mellon of the Treasury is considered a pointed French effort to interest Uncle Sam in the Ruhr problem. Then a semi-official revelation of Britain's desire to win the United States over to co-operation with her is also in evidence. What is said to be "an authoritative and direct footnote on Britain's foreign policy" is made public through the Central News Agency, and reads as follows:

"There is no tenderness in the British Empire for Germany, but the Government believes that if France is out to maintain an indefinite stranglehold on Germany the complete overthrow of the economic situation of Europe, if not of the world, is certain.

"Although there is more than suspicion that the French policy is directed to the isolation of Great Britain in Europe, the British Government is seeking not isolation, but the co-operation of France. If that fails, obviously great Britain will try a hand at the isolation game.

"England may then try to win over Italy, to detach Belgium from her support of France in the Ruhr, and to bring into line with her Holland, Switzerland, Sweden and Norway, who are suffering equally with or more than Great Britain from the effects of the French policy.

"Apart from the immediate aims of the government in Europe, the dominating note of their policy is ultimate co-operation between Great Britain and America for world settlement. No immediate or sensational response from the United States need be expected, but Premier Baldwin believes Europe cannot be saved unless the American people join the British in saving them."

Who Owns Greenland?

What the world needs for its peace is a registry of deeds, a fixed, legal method for determining and recording the nationality of every bit of the globe's surface. Land hunger is an old symptom, but never, it seems, has it been so acute as since the World War. Even the waste places are claimed by somebody, often by two or three powers. The nations seem obsessed with the desire to fence off for themselves as much of the earth as possible and then to keep everyone else out. It is a prolongation of the war state of mind.

Though inhabited chiefly by polar bears, Wrangell Island, in the Arctic, has been "staked" by Vilhjalmur Stefanson, the Icelandic explorer, for Canada, of which country he is a citizen. He thinks it may become valuable as a way station on an aerial route from America to Europe. Who knows? Other possible claimants are the United States and Russia. The discovery of coal on Spitzbergen made the ownership of those islands an urgent issue, which has been settled by putting them under the Norweigian flag, with special reservations.

This summer the issue between Norway and Denmark over their respective rights in Greenland has been drawn sharper. To get the right perspective on their claims, it is necessary to go back a hundred years, to the end of the Napoleonic era. For about five centuries before that time, Norway had been merged with Denmark, and was released, not by its own action, rebellion or revolution, but by military pressure from Sweden on Denmark. Then, on their famous 17th of May, the Norwegians declared anew their ancient independence, first electing a Danish prince as their king and then accepting the constitutional rule of the Swedish monarch. In this transformation the Norwegians failed to preserve the islands in the north Atlantic and Arctic oceans settled by their race. These remained under Danish sovereignty.

Since their complete separation from Sweden in 1905 the Norwegians have been doubly eager to regain all of their patrimony. In 1918, Iceland practically seceded from Denmark, retaining in common only the same king. When Denmark, in 1917, sold the Virgin Islands to the United States, it obtained a release of all American rights, accrued through the explorations of Peary and Greely, in Greenland. Last December, ignoring all Norwegian claims, the Danish Parliament passed an act extending the Danish sovereignty over the entire territory.

This act the Norwegian constitutional parliamentary committee has been reviewing. On July 7 the Storthing accepted its report, which invites the Danish Government to negotiations on a free basis. Not only has Norway never surrendered its rights in Greenland, says the report, but these antedate and exceed in validity the Danish. Great Britain has also made certain reservations, demanding to be consulted, should Denmark ever plan to alienate Greenland. The report also takes up other outstanding matters between Norway and Denmark, notably the disposition of certain archives affecting early Norwegian history. The Faroe Islands, which are inhabited by a Norwegian race, but ruled by Denmark, are also claimed by the Norwegian nationalists.

Greenland is inhabited chiefly by Eskimos, of whom there are about 30,000. There are also along the coast about sixty trading stations. The interior has been explored by hardy men of several nationalities. There is much left to learn. Though at present the trade in fish, seal oil, feathers, skins, and some copper ore is not important, it may develop. The situation seems favorable for wireless stations, and how the development of aviation may affect Greenland no one knows. For the purposes of navigation and meteorology, the large island is a good deal of an enigma. Storms and icebergs are believed to originate there. It is hardly conceivable that two civilized countries should quarrel over such a barren waste, but if they can come to a peaceful agreement they will have set a good example.

"All men are liars," says Don Marquis in his col. in the New York Tribune. And now and then a woman approaches the truth in an original manner.

"The fall of Chungking is momentarily expected," Reuter's reports. We wonder whether it, or the crack 'o doom, will be the louder?

M. C.'S STAND PRAISED

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS:

Dear Sir.—The Municipal Council is to be thanked for having at last detained the proposal of increase in fares submitted by the Tramway Company as per their letter to the latter dated the 20th. instant which appeared in the Municipal Gazette of today's date, and I sincerely hope both the tramusers and your readers to note their remarks, viz:

"Upon mature reflection, I am sure you will agree that, in such matters, more strict adherence to the terms of your agreement is advisable, not only to afford the public opportunity to criticise proposed increases but also to accord with the basic principle that the Council should not sanction such proposals without due investigation since, if uncontrolled, public utility corporations would be in a position unduly to exploit the public."

Meanwhile I again ask the Tramway Company in their turn to find some means to improve their management regarding the safety and comfort of their customers.

Yours faithfully,
W. Yang.

INTERFERENCE WITH FIRE-FIGHTERS

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS:

Sir.—May I trespass on your valuable space in order to draw attention to an incident in connection with the fire that occurred yesterday noon near the Haskell Road.

An engine was stationed in Haskell Road pumping water from the hydrant to extinguish the fire when a car owned and occupied by a gentleman well known in the vicinity appeared upon the scene. This gentleman demanded the Chinese fireman in charge of the engine to cease pumping while the car crossed the hose. The fireman at first refused but as the demand was persisted in he finally gave way and stopped pumping. It was then found necessary to back the engine in order to enable the car to manoeuvre. Altogether it meant a cessation of pumping for some minutes during which the firemen at work on the burning buildings made their way back to the engine to discover the reason for the failure of their water supply.

Now I wish to inquire, sir, if it is permissable for any citizen to act in such a highhanded manner and thus to endanger property (and possibly life) during a conflagration in a populous neighborhood? It may be however that certain persons are specially privileged. Or could it be that this was intended as an example in citizenship for the rising generation! What can be said of the mental attitude of such a citizen? Surely "after me, the deluge" is strangely apposite.

I herewith enclose my card and beg to subscribe myself.

"Observer."

Something To Think About

GETTING USED TO THINGS

An English actor, more than a century ago, created quite a little sensation in a new play. His part was that of a supposed crook who was really honest at heart. The revelation came when he was unjustly accused of forgery. His shock at the unexpectedness of the charge and his horror of the crime were so well acted that it created tremendous applause.

For several weeks the theater was packed nightly and the applause kept up. Then the crowd began to grow thinner and the applause feebler. Gradually, he found himself playing to empty houses, without a single handclap for his great scene. He asked a famous critic what the trouble could be.

"My friend," said the critic, "you're getting used to being accused of forgery."

We travel miles to see a beautiful bit of scenery. The farmer or woodsman or cattleman, who lives on the spot, has grown so used to it that he has no more pleasure in beholding it. A lady once told me that, in mid-ocean, she called the captain's attention to the most wonderful sunset she had ever seen.

"I'm sick and tired of sunsets," he replied. "I want to see a dock."

I suppose it comes natural to all of us. The good things, the blessings of life, are wonderful if we do not possess them, but when we become used to them, they lose their power to thrill us.

How we long for health, when we are ill! And how rarely do we pause, in perfect health, to ponder over our blessing and derive keen enjoyment from the realisation of it!

There are two manifestations of this weakness that are most distressing.

The one is that of the man who marries a sweet, lovable woman whom all the world admires and, after she has borne him children, has toiled for him, has shared his hardships and resisted all temptations that come to an attractive woman, grows so accustomed to her and takes her so much for granted, that he neglects, abuses and finally abandons her.

The other is that of the citizen of America who is so used to its advantages and takes so cold-bloodedly for granted his wonderful good fortune in enjoying its protection and its privileges, that he not only abuses them, but often labors to destroy them.

A five-year sojourn in Russia or Germany or France today would fill such a person with a wild desire to swim over here.

Perhaps, therefore, it might not be a bad idea if we all celebrated a sort of Thanksgiving Day just before we went to bed every night and took a quick survey of the many things we have to be thankful for.

In this way, perhaps, we might unexpectedly discover that we have become so accustomed to some of the greatest wonders and blessings of life that we did not even know we had them.

Every Morning at Breakfast take a draught of SANATOGEN

This will give you that extra nerve-energy which makes you feel "fit" and fresh all day and it will save you from Heat prostration

SANATOGEN in the morning means a better day's work—means that you feel brighter, fresher, and keener all day, in spite of the exhausting heat, while your powers of resistance to typhoid, cholera, dysentery and nervous disorders will be enormously increased.

TRY IT!

SANATOGEN'S power to increase nerve-energy has been definitely proved, in the words of Sir Charles A. Cameron. C.B., M.D., etc. President of the Royal Institute of Public Health:—

Sanatogen is an excellent nerve-food of the highest nutritive value, easily and completely digested.

GET A BOTTLE TO-DAY

ALL CHEMISTS SELL SANATOGEN

Never forget that Sanatogen is a food, not a medicine or a "secret remedy." It increases nerve-energy by feeding the nerves—not by goading them with drugs or stimulants. Its action is as natural as that of any ordinary food: it must do good, and it cannot do harm. That is why doctors give it even to babies. And that is why so many Europeans in the East take Sanatogen regularly, all the year round—not as an occasional "tonic," but as a part of their daily diet. You should do likewise, if you want to keep your nerve-energy at the highest pitch, and to avoid the debilitating effects of the great heat

CITY PERILS

(One would scarcely expect a stranger ignorant of conditions in our fair city, to believe the following):

Jeremiah Q. Dilworthy lived away upon San Javinto Street. He walks home every night. On January first, he promised his wife he would not take another drink in a year. He forgot his promise and on Tuesday night he met some of the boys, and he when started home about 9 o'clock he was feeling a trifle careless.

Mr. Dilworthy was an old resident of Houston, and on rainy nights he always walked in the middle of the street which is well paved.

Alas if Mr. Dilworthy had only remembered the promise unto his wife!

He started out all right, and just as he was walking up San Jacinto Street he staggered over to one side of the street.

A Policeman standing on the corner heard a loud yell of despair, and turning, saw a man throw up his arms and then disappear from sight. Before the policeman could call some one who could swim the man had gone for the third and last time.

Mr. Jeremiah O. Dilworthy had fallen into the sidewalk.

AFTER SUPPER

Mr. Sharp—"My darling, it seems to me that every year that passes over your head but brings out some new charm, some hidden beauty, some added grace. There is a look in your eyes tonight that is as charming and girl-like as when I first met you. What a blessing it is when two hearts can grow but fonder as time flies. Across The Breakfast Table

By Mr. And Mrs. W. L. George

ROVES AND WILD OATS

Mrs. George: I like the man Mamie has in tow at present; he's much nicer than those she had before, and I hope she'll marry him. I'm told that he's been a bit of a roue, and one can see that; one can tell it from the way he tucks the rug round one's feet in and automobile. But he's very charming, well off, and much more likely to settle down into a satisfactory husband than the young men Mamie generally runs about with.

Mr. George: Here we are with the old saying about a reformed rake making the best husband! There may be something in it, but when is one to know when a roue is really reformed? I'm afraid that the most reformed roue is a dead roue. But it's funny the taste you women have for that sort of man. It's curiosity, I suppose; it's the prestige shed by a man whom so many women have adored. You tell yourself that such a man must have become subtle, rich in delicate attentions, deeply understanding. In other words, you admire the expert. And perhaps also you all like to play with fire, hoping that it may warm you and not being quite sure that it won't burn.

Mrs. George: You men are all alike. You all say that young men must sow their wild oats, and then as soon as they've sown a good crop you turn round and call them roues. You may laugh at us, but I feel that a man who's had a lot of experience with women is much more likely to make a good husband than a man who hasn't. Besides, a man who has had experience with a great many women must have met all sorts, and must have found some who were rather exacting. That sort of man would be ready to appreciate a wife as submissive as myself.

What Women Wear

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

Some one once described the mid-Victorian lady's idea of outdoors as the space that had to be passed through in getting from one place to another. It had distinct disadvantages. In the winter it roughened one's skin and made one's nose red and in summer it tanned one's skin and made freckles if one were fair.

There were notable exceptions of course to this attitude; but there were very few exceptions to the prevailing idea that a wrap was something to be worn merely as a covering to one's dress. It was judged by the same standards that apply to slip covers for the drawingroom furniture—quite satisfactory if they conform to the silhouette beneath. For your amusement glance through fashion magazines of your grandmother's and note the prevailing severity of all outdoor wraps.

So far have we departed from that point of view that for some occasions women select evening frocks of the utmost simplicity so as to reveal more distinctly the elaboration of the wrap.

There are fur wraps of ermine or chinchila especially for summer, and one speaks of these with a certain sort of respect at least—for they are amazingly expensive. Then there are the wraps of fabric trimmed with fur. Amber colored velvet bordered with white fox makes a wrap that can be worn successfully with many evening gowns.

An evening wrap of steel-colored silver tissue lined with brilliant green was made to wear with a frock of the same shade of green—and incidentally has attracted more attention than the gown over which it is worn.

A cape that might be worn for afternoon as well as evening is of gravel crepe—the new yellowish gray—draped from neck to hip length in black lace. Four loops of very wide velvet ribbon form a ruff collar at the back with gold roses where they are caught at the collar line, and one streamer of the black velvet ribbon bearing a gold rose hangs down the back to the hem line.

Black lace is worn lavishly—and would have been even if the Queen of England had not recently sponsored the use of Nottingham lace for gowns made to wear at the Ascot races. Paris designers had looked with favor on black lace even before the English queen sought to relieve the unemployment in Nottingham in this way.

The sketch shows the use of black lace both on the gown and cape. It is posed over white georgette and bands of white fur are used as the heading for each ruffle. There are rosettes made of the georgette edged with fur.

White georgette frock trimmed with ruffles of black lace, which are topped with narrow bands of white fur. The cape matches, and there are rosettes of georgette edged with fur.

Comb Full Of Hair? Use Germol

GERMOL Makes Scalp Hold Tight to Hair and Stops It from Falling.

Hair falls out because the hair roots are debilitated. Infuse them with renewed vigor, and your hair will stop falling. This is what happens when you use GERMOL, the newly discovered hair-root strengthener and hair rejuvenator. GERMOL, by giving giant vigor to the hair roots, makes the root sacs grip tightly to every strand of hair. Hair stops falling as a result. You can prove this absolutely by a short treatment with this amazing product, GERMOL. It will bring back to the hair its youthful and normal color, stop the graying process of hair, relieve dandruff and itching scalp, and make your hair grow profusely and luxuriantly. No matter how gray your hair or how bad the hair falling, try it, you'll be surprised.

Is The Modern Mother More Pal: Than Parent?

Author of New Song for Her Day Thinks So, Anyway.

That barometer of American life, the popular song, is responsible for a new register of what the vote and "this freedom" have done for mother.

Twenty years ago, lyricists wrote fervently of a self-sacrificing, adoring woman in comfortable but unfashionable clothes, whose only interest in life was her home and children.

Now the same interpreter depicts mother as a pal who dresses smartly, cultivates pep and goes fishing and to the movies with the boy.

"But," says Joe Burke, who's written "My Pal," this year's Mother's Day song and dedicated it to his own mother, "whatever you may call her, you can bet mother is always on the job when a feller needs a friend. She never has failed him and she never will, no matter how modern she gets."

Moral Reform Must Precede Political Here Says Speaker

"Drafting of constitutions is a useless endeavor unless there is a change of hearts," declared Frank Lee, former Minister of Foreign Affairs in the cabinet of the Southern Government of China under Dr. Sun Yat-sen and now professor of Political Science in Shanghai College, in a sermon delivered before the students and faculty of that college on Sunday morning. His text was from Isaiah 45:3, "I will give thee the treasures of darkness."

"Righteouness exalteth a nation," quoted Mr. Lee from the scriptures. "Here is one treasure China needs today," he added. "When everyone is seeking some method, some political principle, some fundamental solution of China's difficulties, we, as Christians, have the key to the problem. We must seize every opportunity to impress this message and point out the necessity for moral and social reform before there can be real political reform."

"Life's experiences are made up of lights and shadows: joys and sorrows: confident assurance and disheartening doubts," continued the speaker. "There is no person, Christian or non-Christian, who has not experienced at some period of life these moments of subtle fear when physical, mental or spiritual darkness decends like a pall. Little children have an instinctive fear of the dark. Ingorant and superstitious people tremble and quake when the skies become overcast and all of the old familiar landmarks, upon which they formerly relied for guidance, become obliterated.

"But in this incomparable book of God we find that darkness is a part of God's plan for his universe. The Creator of light is also the Creator of darkness; and as light brings us a message of his Divine Love, so darkness may give us a more intimate assurance of his presence."

Mr. Lee spoke of the mission of Isaiah in a period of darkness for Israel. He told of how Isaiah warned the people of the threatening calamities and they paid no heed to him.

"Isaiah," then declared the speaker, "fearlessly predicted the inevitable disaster, but crowned his prophecy with a promise that God would restore a remnant of his people by the hand of a man named Cyrus. Do you seek a miracle to confirm your faith in God? The fulfillment of prophecy is a perpetual miracle. Biblical predictions have been fulfilled in history and are being fulfilled in present times. The essence of history is but the progress of religious and ethical development of the human race.

"Cyrus was promised the treasures of darkness. Some commentators have interpreted this to mean that God wuld give Cyrus the spoils of that wealthy city, Babylon. I like to believe that the promise meant more than this. In the days of Judah's darkness Cyrus was given the invaluable privilege of delivering a chastened and purified people from their Babylonian captivity, and restoring them to their God-given land fom which was to come the Savior of mankind, Jesus Christ. That is why Cyrus, a non-Jewish king, is called God's annointed. He was raised up for this particular time and task.

"But what treasures were given to Judah during the seventy years of captivity in Babylon? God gave them treasures of repentance. Judah returned to the very foundations of their faith. They learned the unchanging truth, righteousness and mercy of God. When they were restored to their beloved Judea, under the leadership of Ezra and Nehemiah they were ready to take up again the torch of truth and resume the religious leadership among the nation, for which God had prepared them.

"Now what bearing has all this upon our present day problems? Anyone with even a superficial knowledge of China will recognise that all is not well with our country. Those who have a more comprehensive knowledge of our affairs frankly admit that China is beset with manifold problems and imminent dangers. These are unquestionably dark days. Laws may be made to penalise unsocial and demoralising conduct but laws cannot uproot the unrighteousness, selfishness and greed in the hearts of the people. It takes God to do that."

Hundreds Of Chinese Flee To Caves Following Prediction

China Press Correspondence

Lincheng, Sept. 24.—Superstitious Chinese in the vicinity of this famed bandit rendezvous have made all preparations for the predicted end of the world following the Mid-Autumn festival.

Hundreds have gone to caves they have dug in nearby Shantung hills, there to await the crack of doom. Yesterday word came that many of the old Pao Tzu Ku bandits were returning to their mountain fortress to await the end of the world, and detachments from Tenchoufu, Tenghsien and Thrien and one battalion of bandit-soldiers immediately left to keep their eye on them.

The bandit situation again is getting serious, particularly in the vicinity of the Tsao Chuang coal mines where General Sun Mei-yao, formerly leader of the bandits who held the foreign captives for nearly forty days, who now commands the bandit-soldiers, is said to be unable to cope with the situation.

GREATER TOKIO IS PLANNED BY JAPAN'S CHIEFS

City Of Wide Boulevards To Rise From Ruins Of Old Capital

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokio, Sept. 26.—It is semi-officially reported that with regard to the reconstruction of the imperial capital, the government has formulated an outline. According to this outline, the reconstruction work is to last fifteen years at a minimum cost of 3,000,000,000 Yen.

The capital is to be divided into residential, commercial and factory quarters with its center in the district of Marunouchi, from which radiate four broad highways, each 60 ken (360 feet) in width, in addition to sub-highways 40 ken or 20 ken in width. Several circular roads are also to be constructed.

All along the Sumida River, a park road 60 ken in width is also to be made with the object of turning it into a refuge or a zone for protection against fire in such an emergency as the last disaster. Surface tramways, elevated electric railways, and underground railways are to be newly constructed, while the existing canals are to be enlarged and more canals to be newly constructed to supply water in case of fire.

A harbor is to be constructed so as to allow ocean-going steamers of 10,000 tons to enter and leave freely.

Both drains and water-mains, a central market, and parks are to be newly constructed.

Family Of Suicide Unharmed In Quake

(Reuter's Service)

New York, Sept. 26.—A poignant sequel to the suicide of Tokunosuke Inouye of the Mitsui Company is the receipt of a delayed telegram from Tokio addressed to Inouye announcing that the first report was erroneous and that his family is safe.

Tokunosuke Inouye leaped from the fifteenth flour of a skyscraper and was instantly killed on September 14. He was apparently demented in consequence of news to the effect that his wife and two children had perished in the earthquake in Japan.
